Is love written on the stars? What about compatibility? Is your love for moving the streets? Astrology actually has a lot to say about the relationship, love and compatibility indicators between the two. Birth chart analysis can show what a person is looking for in love. But that's just the beginning! Astrology can also show you how you and your loved ones push each other. Looking at your synthesizer. And it can even analyze your relationship itself! This one also has a horoscope and is called a composite or compatibility chart. All of these relationships can be very helpful in the tricky and dangerous terrain, but the rest is up to you. Is this love? Is this relationship worth it? Only you can tell. Knowing exactly what you stand for will definitely help. Get started by providing a taste of astrology compatibility indicators, synergy, and composite charts! The point of astrology covered in synastry and compatibility charts relationships in astrology uses a method called Synastry. This allows two charts to be placed one by one on top of the other chart to see how they fit together. Are you like a glove? Are they treading on each other's toes? Or rarely register? Ideally, you're looking for more difficult aspects (e.g. rectangles, opposites) with some powerful compatibility indicators (such as connections, trines, same/compatible signs and elements). Why challenges? Without challenges, relationships are so boring. With the same token, if there is only a challenge (for example, the Sun Square sun, Venus square moon, Saturn opposite Mars), it becomes too difficult to make it worth it soon, even if it is attractive. You can check the overall compatibility between the different star signs for yourself! It can also be difficult to have the same planet on adjacent signs. For example, people with mercury in gemini thrive in conversation, while people with mercury in cancer need silence. You do the math... Some of the most classic compatibility indicators in synthesis are the harmonious aspects between the sun and moon, or the moon and Venus - famously - the planets Venus and Mars love. Having gold in the same sign as others's Mars (and vice versa) is a very strong indicator of sexual attraction and sexual compatibility. Put it crudely, Venus indicates what you want in bed and mars what you do in bed. Simple. Another big one, though of sexual nature, combines the moon and Venus in harmony - especially. It creates a strong affinity and friendship between the two because one person's needs (moon) create a good feeling and happiness with another person's desires (Venus). So far, one of the biggest compatibility indicators of couples stuck together is harmonysun and moon - whether on signs with the same symbols, such as elements or compatible elements. This allows two people to support each other instead of hostile, and drawing a protective line in the sand will not cross anyone. The opposite star sign deserves a special mention here. They are compatible elements (earth, fire air), even though the opposite side can be difficult. So the opposite signs often fascinate each other, challenging each other and at the same time complementing each other, creating very stimulating relationships! This is also in fact, when it involves someone's ascendant or rising sign. Even the opposite can mean mercuries talk (inconsistency?) and never stop! We should note that the sturdy Saturn side can also play an important role in synthesizers. Unless Saturn's heavy demands crush your relationship to your feet, it can lend you two determinations to work it and move the distance! A composite chart of astrology is a composite chart of astrology, once your astrology makes you tick individually (birth chart) and you and your loved ones have seen how to bounce away from each other (synonym), you can draw a third horoscope. Composite chart - This is a constellation of relationships itself. You may think: is the relationship work? Does it really have all the horoscopes of their own? Yes yes! And it's more and more alive and no longer interacting with the two and becoming influential! Composite charts do what you say in comments. It is composed from a chart of individual people. It superimposes personal horoscopes (like in synthesis) and then goes one step further and integrates them into one constellation. Astrologists (and their computer programs) always do this by traveling the shortest distances and calculating the halfway point between each planet and point of the zodiac (sun and sun, moon, moon, moon, etc.). So if one of you has a sun from Aries and Leo, your relationship is Gemini (bang in the middle)! What does this mean? First of all, you will survive as a couple when you have learning, writing, traveling, or other curious activities. Secondly, the transmission that now affects Gemini - for example The Archer's Saturn - will also affect and challenge your relationship! Isn't it good to know? The location of the planet's house is also important. For example, if you have a relationship with the sun in your sixth home, you can work or work together. There are compatibility indicators to look at in the composite chart as well. As usual, it is always good to have harmony between the moon and the sun, for example, indicating that the 'husband' and 'wife' - people in this relationship - are in stages with each other, even if this is the same sex relationship. On the other hand, the square between Gold and Saturn indicates an unloved feeling of one or two parties. This can happen even if you love each other very much and are mutually attractive. As relationships develop, it becomes more difficult to express this love. These complex aspects may also indicate financial problems. Knowing and recognizing that such a dynamic relationship occurs purely in the relationship itself and neither partner is to blame can give wonders to the relationship, especially if there is love, gratitude and good will. This is one of the ways astrology can provide valuable tools to help love win the day! Why not call one of our professional stargiers?
